There's a new establishment in the Central Business District that's a welcome break from ritzy but monotonous business hotels. Everything at Klapsons Boutique Hotel is as functional here as it is aesthetically pleasing.

The stylish decor makes an impression the moment you step in. Designed by Italian designer William Sawaya, the lobby is decked out with an eclectic ensemble of furniture, including Zaha Hadid's iconic Glacier bench. With a farm of tilted floor lamps with white shades to one side and pink coffee tables at the other, there's never a boring corner here. The three-tiered organic ceiling blends into the whole scheme of things while soft lighting fills the alluring lobby.

Smack in the middle of the hotel's lobby is a large, shiny stainless steel sphere that houses the front desk which took four months to weld, mould and polish.

No two rooms are alike in terms of interiors. We particularly like the suite with the open-cube rain shower, accompanied by romantic colour changing lights and full length mirrors in the stall. To bring some variation to your stay why not try changing rooms for a different view? We're guessing the front desk will oblige. ↗
